

Jawaharlal Nehru University (JNU)

The Jawaharlal Nehru University is a premier university of India and is ranked among the better universities of the world. The School of Life Sciences at the Jawaharlal Nehru University is renowned for its pioneering efforts in multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary teaching and research. The School of Life Sciences has excellent facilities to carry out collaborative research project and conducive academic and social environment. The school boasts of an internationally competitive faculty that comprises of experts and active researchers representing all areas of modern biology in the field of microbial, plant and animal research. The School of Life Sciences is recognized by government bodies as a Centre for Advanced Studies with potential for excellence. It is generously funded by all the funding agencies of the country as well as attracts grants from international agencies as WHO, NIH, Welcome Trust, European Commission and others.

The School has an excellent infrastructural set up and is equipped with sophisticated, state-of-the-art instruments to carry out high end contemporary research. Among other instruments there are facilities for genomics, proteomics, structural biology, transgenic and molecular modeling studies. The School of Life Sciences attracts the best brains from all over the country as well as abroad through a highly competitive examination and produces researchers who have been carrying out cutting edge research in biological sciences the world over.

Website address:

www.jnu.ac.in/

